The Friday session of the UN Security Council devoted to UNMIK will be opened for the public, and along with UN Secretary General Ban Ki-moon, Serbian President Boris Tadic will also address the member-states, the spokesman for the United States Mission to the United Nations Benjamin Chang said.

According to the plan, the UN secretary general will first present his latest report on Kosovo in which he proposes the reconfiguration of UNMIK, and after that Serbian President Boris Tadic will address the participants.

Kosovo President Fatmir Sejdiu will also address the participants, Chang said and added that after that UN Security Council Ambassadors will hold a discussion and present their stands.

Serbian Foreign Minister Vuk Jeremic pointed out that interim Kosovo president Sejdiu will attend the UN SC session but in the capacity of a private person because “Kosovo is not an independent state.”
