High representatives of the European Union, NATO, the OSCE and the UN are discussing in Brussels on Friday the international presence in Kosovo, in the light of the announced reconfiguration of the UN mission in the province.

“It is an informal meeting about the future international presence, and no decision will be taken”, diplomatic sources said.

EU’s High Representative Javier Solana and NATO’s Secretary-General Jaap de Hop Scheffer are being joined by ambassadors from EU and NATO countries.

One of the key discussion points is the reconfiguration of the Unmik mission, which still has to receive organizational and operational frames.

“Precise directives for Unmik chief Lamberto Zannier have still to arrive”, one diplomatic source said.
