Serbs are not satisfied with state of human rights in Kosovo

KosovoCompromise Staff

Serbian Minister for Kosovo Goran Bogdanovic has assessed, speaking on the occasion of December 10 - Human Rights Day, that Kosovo is the "black hole" of Europe when it comes to the observance of basic human rights.

"There is still no rule of law in the province, there is no full freedom of movement for Serbs and other non-Albanians in Kosovo and, even after almost ten years since the arrival of the international community in Kosovo, they still live in fear and uncertainty," Bogdanovic said.

He pointed out that many people in Kosovo who are true owners cannot access their property and that other people farm their land.
